What is startling to read in "Daimler-Benz in the Third Reich," Neil Gregor's well-documented study of the automaker in wartime, is the extent of complicity by owners and managers in the deadly excesses of their country. At the same time that the manufacturer of Hitler's favorite car, the Mercedes-Benz, was building tanks, trucks and aircraft engines for the war effort, it was also a transit point for people going to the death camps, with the collusion of the SS, the fuehrer's most-feared Daimler-Benz in the Third Reich: Neil Gregor ...
