For purposes of evaluating an invention under section 102 or 103 of title 35, United States Code, any strategy for reducing, avoiding, or deferring tax liability, whether known or unknown at the time of the invention or application for patent, shall be deemed insufficient to differentiate a claimed invention from the prior art.

Did A Melatonin Patent Inspire Current Dose Confusion ...

Re whether it is dumb to limit the dose, there are a variety of reasons this might be done. One is that an invention must be useful, which means, more or less, that it works. As explained in the story linked to, high doses may actually impede sleep. So the claim might have been limited to satisfy the utility requirement. However, the most likely explanation for the limit turns on the
